A powder that kills insects, a machine that produces indestructible bubbles, lakeshores that are "cleaned" to make way for beautiful patios. These acts may well seem innocuous, but they bear heavy consequences for the environment and the inhabitants of Clementine's Kingdom.

One day, the king's soldiers began to clean up the castle grounds. They cut the grass, trimmed the bushes and raked the paths. As he stood supervising the work, Mook Chook, the head gardener, talked with the king. Just for fun, Clementine hid behind a tree to spy on them.

"Sire," said Mook Chook, "we should clean up the lakeshore too. The undergrowth is obstructing the view. And the shoreline has become overgrown with reeds. Why don't we build a beautiful terrace with a statue of your Majesty?"

"Hmm..." said the king, flattered, "a statue of me? What a good idea!"

Clementine had heard everything. She burst out of her hiding place.

Despite being in love with Philippe d'Orléans, Adelaide cannot resist her attraction to Louis-Auguste de Bourbon on meeting him. But the king, who plans to arrange princely marriages for his bastards and to destroy all threats to his absolute power, arranges marriages that have all the makings of a mismatch. Adelaide is forced to exile herself to New France. She returns in 1718 to a Paris that is experiencing a new vibrancy thanks to Philippe d'Orléans. In her heart, however, nothing has changed.

2113. A young woman with amnesia. A troubled past, marked by death and suffering. A sprawling city where only the rich have access to the sunlight. A scientist on a quest for immortality.

Genetic modifications that exceed anything thought possible. The truth at last. Except it's even more horrifying than all the lies.

From the author of the successful series Luna that has sold nearly 200,000 copies.

1558. France is being torn apart by both the power struggle between the houses of Guise and Bourbon, and the growing war between Protestants and Catholics. In the tense climate that reigns over the country, Clemence de Lonjais leaves her native Gascony for the king's court. The young girl who expects the sovereign's favourite to arrange an advantageous match for her will soon discover that Catherine de Medici has other plans for her.

On April 19th, 1925, William Black decides to free the Agrippa, which has been imprisoned in the crypt of st. Matthew's church since October 1855. The 44-year-old man, a power-hungry practitioner of the dark arts, is unscrupulous. The release of this book of dark spells will have grave consequences, and the inhabitants of the small community will not be spared.

Late November. Mother has been dead for three weeks. And I still feel nothing.

“My name is Philippe Morel.

I'm 53 years old. I'm a communications professional. Apart from my car, my laptop, my tablet, my iPhone, Lanvin, Gucci and Hugo Boss, I have few friends. I can't form connections with others, the living, the organic. It's strange, but that's the way it is. And it's probably due to the fact that I don't have a navel...”

— Salut Babette! Tu as vu? Plusieurs chaudières sont remplies. Que fait-on, maintenant?
— Il est temps de faire notre première tournée.
— D'accord, c'est parfait pour moi. Et on va tourner quoi?
— Nous allons tourner autour des érables.
Gonzague est inquiet. Il se demande si son amie n'a pas trop bu de cette eau sucrée.
— Ne te fais pas de soucis, Gonzague. Effectuer la tournée, c'est faire le tour parmi les érables pour ramasser l'eau. Maintenant que Gonzague est rassuré, il s'empresse d'aider

Babette. Il sait exactement où sont les chaudières pleines puisqu'il a vérifié tous les érables plusieurs fois par jour.

Pourtant, on peut voir qu'on s'en approche grâce à certains signes: la route n'est plus bordée de grands arbres mais d'arbustes rachitiques, les maisons sont si basses que leurs toits touchent le sol, et les pantalons des habitants sont tellement usés aux genoux qu'ils en sont transparents.
Plus on avance et plus les gens ont le dos rond, même lorsqu'ils ne portent rien sur leurs épaules, même lorsqu'ils sont jeunes. Seuls les tout petits enfants se tiennent droit, et encore. Malourene est affligée par le spectacle de ces gens dont l'horizon semble s'arrêter au bout de leurs pieds.
