

Éric Péladeau • Geneviève Viel-Taschereau

RooOoO Seeeeeee!

That's Daddy's calling.

— Can you come here please,
my angel?

From the tone of his voice, this sounds important. But the little girl doesn't answer.

In the bathroom, Daddy points to the contents of the toilet bowl.

— My darling Rose, did you leave this little gift in the toilet?

Rose is offended.

— No, Daddy. It wasn't me, I swear, she says shaking her head.

— But then who could have left behind this floating piece of poop? Daddy asks. It can't have appeared by magic.

— It really wasn't me! Rose insists.

Daddy thinks for a second.

— If it was neither you nor me, I'm afraid my dear Rose that we have a mystery on our hands. We have to find whoever's responsible for this lone turd.

After drawing up a list of suspects, Rose and Daddy hurry to the family room where a box of costumes awaits. You have to be appropriately attired to conduct an investigation.

The chest contains jackets, detective hats and other accessories, including the handiest of tools: a magnifying glass.

- Detective Rose, what's the first name on our list of suspects? Daddy asks in a funny accent.
- It's Pumpkin, our cat! Rose replies.

The two inspectors tiptoe over to the cat's litter. The cat purrs from her perch on the bookshelf. As she watches, Daddy examines the content of the litter while Rose digs to uncover a few turds.

— Hmm! These turds don't look like the one floating in the toilet. We can scratch Pumpkin off our list of suspects, Daddy announces.

— Meow! Pumpkin purrs, pretending to be interested in what's happening below.

Oops!

It seems like someone forgot to flush the toilet. An abandoned poo floats in the bowl. When Dad asks Rose if this doo-doo is hers, the little girl vigorously denies it.

Could it be a magic poo?
